KEEPING TAB ON THE WORLD

Drift Toward Federal Control of Railroads Shown by Interviews With Financiers and Presidential Conferences—Railroad Men Advance Rates to Retaliate For State Legislation and Agitation—Intervention In Central America Fore-shadowed—Revolt In Roumania.

EXECUTIVE

New Waterways Commission.
President Roosevelt has recently inaugurated a movement having for its purpose the development of a comprehensive plan for the improvement and control of the river systems of the United States. To this end he has appointed an inland waterways commission consisting of Theodore E. Burton, chairman; Senator Francis G. Newlands, Senator William Warner, John H. Bankhead, General Alexander Mackenzie, Dr. W. J. McGee, F. H. Newell, Gifford Pinchot and Herbert Knox Smith. In his letter to Congressman Burton notifying him of his appointment the president refers to the inability of the railroads to afford prompt transportation to the products of the country and the necessity of providing a complementary water system, a subject which has received but scant attention in the past. The commission, he says, should consider the relations of the streams to the use of all the permanent natural resources and their conservation for the making and maintenance of prosperous homes. He also believes that any plan to be feasible should recognize the means for executing it already in existence, both in the departments of the federal government and in the states and their subdivisions.

Theodore E. Burton.

For the first time in the history of the United States Military academy negro soldiers are to be stationed at the West Point post, a detachment of the Ninth cavalry having been designated for that purpose. This experiment on the part of the war department was brought about through the dissatisfaction of the white troops with the extra duties devolving upon them in the care of the horses used by the military cadets. While they were willing to look after their own mounts, they did not like the idea of caring for all the horses in the cadet battalion. This detachment of negro cavalrymen comprises, it is said, all the negro troops remaining in the United States, the others being now in the Philippines or on their way there.

POLITICAL

John D. a Federalist.

In a newspaper interview while he was en route from the south John D. Rockefeller declared emphatically that federal control of all the railroads would be a good thing for them as well as for the general public. He said that the railroads and other big corporations were greatly overcapitalized, and his only explanation of that policy by men with whom he had been associated was the temptation to make money faster.

Presidential Conferences.

The question of how best to deal with the railroad situation has been the theme of a series of White House conferences since last week when Governor Deneen and Attorney General Stead of Illinois called to see the president. The general impression was that the chief executive wanted to head off state legislation respecting railroads by bringing about an agreement to depend upon the action of congress in future to control the common carriers.

After having held a conference with other railroad heads at New York, President Mellen of the New York, New Haven and Hartford went alone to Washington and saw the president. Although no official statement was given out, it was learned that the Roosevelt and Mellen ideas did not mix well. Other railroad officials were expecting to see the president shortly.

Governor Johnson of Minnesota suggested that the president call a national conference of state and federal officials to reach some harmonious basis of railroad management. Johnson says he agrees entirely with the Roosevelt programme of federal control.

The president received Banker Seligman of New York and explained his policies.

Smith's Railroad Checkrein.

As a punishment for those railroads which retaliate on lawmakers by reducing service or pay, Governor Hoke Smith of Georgia, in an address at the banquet of the Cincinnati Receivers' and Shippers' association, advocated limited railroad ownership, national, state and municipal, to supplement national and state control.

Bryan in Praise of Unions.

That the labor unions have been the greatest forces for good in America was the opinion expressed by W. J. Bryan in a speech before Chicago unionists. He credited organized labor with introducing the Australian ballot, raising wages, shortening hours of labor and raising the age limit of child labor.

Hearst After-Traction Merger.

W. R. Hearst has filed with the attorney general of New York a petition for the prosecution of the Ryan-Belmont traction merger of New York city street railways, charging a deliberate conspiracy to stifle competition and to deprive the city of adequate transportation facilities.

Morton Defends Roosevelt.

In a formal newspaper interview Paul Morton, president of the Equitable Life, announced his position as being in favor of the federal supervision of all railroads, by constitutional amendment if necessary. He expressed the opinion that if legislation to this end is blocked it will result in federal ownership, which would be the most unfortunate thing for the people of this country. He said he regarded President Roosevelt as a conservative force and that he would be so regarded in future by many who are now opposing him. He is in favor of legalized pooling.

Would Put Harriman in Jail.

United States Senator Cullom of Illinois, after emerging from an interview with President Roosevelt, said he had told the president that if he had his way he would try to put E. H. Harriman in the penitentiary on account of the Alton deal alone.

Fish Assails Roosevelt.

After giving a lecture at the University of Pennsylvania on faith as the basis of finance Stuyvesant Fish in a talk with reporters said that Theodore Roosevelt had always been unsteady, though well meaning, but that there were others just as well meaning who have more discretion and who are more reliable.

SOCIOLOGICAL

To Promote Labor Peace.

Under the act of congress establishing the fund for the promotion of industrial peace which was provided by President Roosevelt out of the proceeds of the Nobel peace prize the president has appointed four trustees—namely, John Mitchell, president of the United Mine Workers of America, as representative of labor; Marvin Hughitt, president of the Chicago and Northwestern Railroad company, as representative of capital; Seth Low of New York and Thomas G. Bush of Birmingham, Ala., as representatives of the general public. These are in addition to the chief justice of the United States, the secretary of commerce and labor and the secretary of agriculture.

Cleaning Up San Francisco.

Last week about 2,000 men with 3,000 teams joined in the first public volunteer street cleaning bee. In ten hours more debris was removed than had been done in ten months with the regular staff. Business men shoveled side by side with day laborers, clerks and professional men. Army buglers sounded the call to work at 8 o'clock. The streets near police headquarters were cleaned in short order by prisoners arrested for minor offenses, after which they were set free.

Rules of Colony Club.

"Liberty without license" is the unofficial motto of the new Colony club which ultra fashionable women of New York have just opened on Madison avenue. Within this magnificent structure three indulgences common to men's clubs are sanctioned—namely, wine, card playing and smoking—that is, wine is served with meals, and card playing must not be for money, while only in certain rooms, where it might prove disagreeable, is the cigarette prohibited. One of the new features is the idea of providing rooms for out of town members who wish a temporary residence for shopping or entertainments. Besides this the conveniences include a squash court, roof garden, gymnasium, library, pool room and elaborate baths. The swimming pool is sixty-eight feet in length and thirty-five feet wide so extended by mirrors that the eye sees five tanks in succession in every direction. It has a grape trellis above supported by pillars so that the water reflects the cool green of the leaves.

Magazine For the Blind.

The first regular literary magazine to be published in the English language for the use of blind people, provision for which was made by Mrs. Ziegler, widow of the baking powder millionaire, has made its appearance. It is about eight times as bulky as a copy of the Century Magazine, although containing fewer words. One section deals with important current events of the month. Copies will be sent free to the blind, who, according to statistics, now number 50,568 in the United States.

LEGAL-CRIMINAL

Thaw Lunacy Commission.

The trial of Harry Thaw for the murder of Stanford White at New York was brought to a sensational suspension March 20 when District Attorney Jerome abandoned his case for the state in order to move the appointment of a commission to determine the present state of the defendant's mind. It was while Dr. Allan McLane Hamilton was on the stand as a witness for the defense that the district attorney declared his belief that Thaw was now insane and absolutely incapable of instructing his counsel and that consequently the state had no right to try him for his life. He said, furthermore, that he believed that Thaw had been insane all along, when he shot White and prior to that event.

Jerome had expressed the opinion that if Dr. Hamilton were allowed to testify in full to what he knew he would give it as his opinion that Thaw was insane at that moment and that counsel for the defense knew this to be so, but had concealed the fact. He said he was prevented by the attitude of the defense from bringing out facts about insanity in the Thaw family and thus present conditions which would shock the conscience of the court and stop the trial. It was then that Lawyer Gleason, one of the counsel for the defense, who had been superseded by Delmas as chief counsel, insisted upon questioning the witness as to whether he had made any such statement about Thaw's insanity to the counsel for defense. To the surprise of every one, the witness said he had done so several months ago and denied that he had told Gleason that the defendant was suffering from a curable form of insanity.

Prior to this climax the state had succeeded in introducing the affidavit which Thaw's wife is alleged to have signed at the instigation of Stanford White in the office of Lawyer Hummel, in which she told of Thaw's brutal treatment of her during their European trip before they were married. But this document proved to be somewhat of a boomerang, because it showed that Hummel, contrary to his statement on the stand, had acted as her counsel, thus paving the way for attacking the credibility of the entire testimony of Hummel.

Jail For Coal Trust Head.

Samuel E. Howell, president of the Omaha Coal trust, has been sentenced to six months in jail and pay a fine of $2,000, which was the limit of the law. Judge Sutton in sentencing Howell told him he was "no better than a common highwayman who put a revolver to a man's face and made him give up his money." He said that if it had not been for money and good lawyers Howell would have been "in jail long ago, where he belonged."

Pittsburg Merger Carried Up.

The opposition of the people of Allegheny City to the consolidation with Pittsburg into the community to be known as the Greater Pittsburg has caused the filing with the United States supreme court of a writ of error from the decision of the Pennsylvania supreme court, which had dismissed a bill brought to prevent the consolidation. The case cannot be heard in its turn for at least a year, and this will delay the legal birth of the Greater Pittsburg.

Marvin Kidnaping Case.

The strange disappearance of Horace Marvin, Jr., the three-year-old child of Dr. Horace Marvin of Bay Meadows, Del., continued to attract attention and to appeal to the sympathies of the general public. The governor and other state officials of Delaware lent their aid, and it was even reported that the distracted father had gone to Washington to ask for help from the federal authorities. At one time it appeared that the boy had been located at Erie, Pa., where an attorney named Howard tried to collect the ransom offered by means of a waif boy whose age and appearance tallied with that of the missing child. The lawyer even had the boy speak over the long distance phone to Dr. Marvin, but this effort to collect ransom was unmasked by the detectives. On Wednesday Dr. Marvin left his home, and it was supposed he had been called to some point to identify a child believed to be his son. One of the Delaware detectives who was employed on the case, Frederick Murphy, had disappeared.

More Ruff Indictments.

The San Francisco grand jury has presented sixty-five new indictments against Abe Ruff for bribery in connection with railroads and other public utility companies which had secured municipal franchises. Bail was fixed at $5,000 cash or $10,000 in bonds on each indictment, which, in addition to the $100,000 bail previously ordered, brought the total up to $750,000. District Attorney Langdon remarked that this ought to hold Ruff.

Prior to this the district attorney had secured confessions from several of the city supervisors containing specific evidence of graft to the amount of $700,000 and possibly much more. It was shown that the United railroads paid each supervisor $4,000, the gas company $700, the prize fight trust $500, the Pacific States Telephone company $5,000 and the Home Telephone company $2,000. In this same schedule it was shown that Ruff and Schmitz had collected amounts well up in the hundreds of thousands, it being shown that the United railroads paid $450,000 for the trolley franchise. All of the supervisors were permitted to tell their story before the grand jury and thus become immune from prosecution. Indictments were also returned against T. B. Halsey, counsel for the Pacific States Telephone company, who is understood to be a fugitive in the Philippines.

The San Francisco authorities are inclined to make favorable terms with Ruff and Schmitz if they will give the necessary evidence to convict Patrick Calhoun of New York, president of the United Railroads, and other capitalists of the "higher-up" class.

THE BUSY BEAVERS.

These Tireless Workers Have Altered America's Landscape.

Because its operations are chiefly nocturnal, so that it is seldom or never seen, and because of its skill in controlling water and in house building, something of mystery has grown up about the beaver. It is said that it fells trees for the purpose of building its dams and can lay a tree where it wishes to with the accuracy of the most skilled axman. It is said also that it uses its tail as a trowel, plastering the mud on its houses and dams with this appendage as a mason spreads his mortar.

Myths like these will probably have a long life. The latter belief is no doubt encouraged by the beaver's frequent habit of slapping the water or earth with its tail as an alarm signal whenever it is startled. There are many unexplained things about the beaver's life.

Long before the white man came to America the beaver was hard at work building his dams all over the country and in narrow and sometimes in wide stream valleys, arresting the water and so collecting in its ponds the detritus swept down from the hills and from the upper reaches of the stream.

As this sediment gradually filled up the shallow ponds the beaver moved to other places, and when in time the dam broke down and the waters drained off a wide level meadow was left—the bottom of the old pond.

All over the continent in suitable localities, from Mexico north to the tree limit and from the Atlantic to the Pacific, this was going on century after century, and in this way no doubt were made vast areas of level meadow, whose origin is now unsuspected by the people who occupy them.—Forest and Stream.

PUZZLES IN NATURE.

Some of the Seeming Contradictions That Science Encounters.

The man of science, like the man of law, has brought before him many an anomaly; but, unlike the judge or the advocate, he knows that the contradictions he studies are only such in seeming. He feels confident that nature at the core is in agreement with herself. Any day, he believes, these apparent contradictions may be resolved into cases of detected law, not simple enough to disclose itself to aught but the most rigorous analysis.

In the realm of heat it seems that certain rules of radiation, conduction, boiling points and the like are general, not universal. In most cases they act as if alone; in a few cases their effect is masked by causes as yet not understood. Let a few cases as perplexing as that of the alloys under refrigeration be briefly recounted.

Common solder has a lower melting point than any of its ingredients. Sulphur fuses at 120 C. and thickens again at 220 C. When steel is heated and dipped into cold water it is hardened; the same treatment softens copper. While almost every substance expands with heat, rubber shrinks. In most cases electrical conductivity is impaired by increase of temperature, yet a carbon pencil rises to an almost threefold augmentation of conductivity when brought to incandescence in an electric lamp.

We may be well assured that when these anomalies are resolved the explanations will bear in their train other difficulties for research yet more subtle. Science never does anything more than where, as here, she points to her own unfinished walls and bids the student as a privilege and a duty to supply their gaps as best he may.—George Iles.

"Old Moore."

"Old Moore," under whose name almanacs and prophecies have been appearing regularly for generations, was not a charlatan. His name was Henry Andrews. He was a bookseller of London, and, according to an old year book, "his prophecies were as much laughed at by himself as by the Worshipful Company of Stationers, for whom he manufactured them, in order to render Moore's almanac salable among the ignorant, in whose eyes a lucky hit covered a multitude of blunders." Andrews "had a very extraordinary genius for astronomy and was greatly esteemed for his integrity and modesty by every scientific man who was personally acquainted with him."

Moses Tyler Stevens.

It is a rare distinction to be accorded the place in any community carried by the title, "the first citizen." When that community has such associations and history as is possessed by the town of Andover and her neighboring cities and towns, the distinction has added value. To that man whose life passed out during this week this entire section of the Merrimack valley has long accorded this remarkable title. His home town was dear to him, but hardly less dear were the neighboring towns where his activities had so long been striking forces in their best life.

Moses Tyler Stevens—the first citizen. First in the hearts of his neighbors; sharing their joys and sorrows, and always the refuge for their troubles in almost countless cases where advice or substantial aid would best serve to assist.

First in the hearts of his employees; a just man and employer, he dignified all labor by recognizing its highest worth; he dignified his own large accumulations of wealth by never abusing its power.

First in the hearts of his business associates; if he dominated them, it was because they yielded joyfully to the mastery of his ability; if they shared power with him it was in the pleasure of such co-operation as one generous heart gets from another.

First as a home lover; what an inspiration his home life was! Wife, children, relatives, and friends passed the threshold of his house into one of the rare atmospheres, whose influence lingered long after the visit to make a memory of what so many have felt to be the almost ideal New England home life.

What a host was Mr. Stevens! His home was his guests' home, his welcome was such as no other seemed to quite match, his knowledge of affairs met the interest of every sort of a visitor, his abundance of sympathy was an inexhaustible storehouse for every man with a story to tell. His public service was inspired by the highest purpose, and served to show even more clearly the splendid character which was in him.

He hated show; he despised hypocrisy; he abhorred ostentation; he loved true things whether they were policies or men, and for true things as he knew them he always stood. No one will ever know what help he rendered to the young men in business in this neighborhood. The men themselves know and not the least aid that they will ever cherish, was that lesson he taught to so many of them, that they must prove their worth if they would merit his aid.

It was a rare life; it closed in the fullness of years; it leaves a memory that is redolent of all that is best in the family, in business, in public life, in helpful association with neighbors and friends. A friend is gone, not a friend to any narrow circle, but a friend to the great circle where the widespread interest of Moses T. Stevens had so long been felt.

The following communication deserves more prominence than the corner of the page, and is printed here not only that it may have such prominence, but that it may be read in connection with comments that are so readily suggested by it. It is from one of the town's long-time honored ladies, and is as follows:—

To the Townsman:—
I am much impressed with your editorial, concerning the best way of advancing the boy problem in Andover. Is not the greatest need, including the mill interest, centered among those whose environment is least conducive to uplift in general?

As I follow the developments of the Andover Guild, it seems to me to be working upon the right basis, especially as I read its weekly letter in your columns.

If our citizens would familiarize themselves with what this organization is accomplishing, I think there would be no lack of funds or workers, and it might soon become a tower of strength in dealing with this ever present and perplexing problem, of how most to benefit the girls and boys of our town.

MRS. W. F. DRAPER.

We don't know when we have seen a helping hand held out to any local movement, where there was so much of encouragement and inspiration to accompany it, as in this case. More than four score years have passed over Mrs. Draper's head, and in those years she has lived so close to the activities of the town that she has learned to know much of the town's needs, and to share in much of its accomplishments. While there are some of our people who will not agree with her conclusion that the Guild fills the requirements of the boy problem, many who are interested in the Guild work will take new courage over their labors in that organization, because of her note.

One thing is sure, there is an awakening of interest in this question that augurs much for its right solution in due season.

He will take up his new duties as chief of police on Monday morning.

Morse, the newly appointed night watchman, will succeed Newton Jaquith, jr., whose beat included Abbott and Marland Villages and North Main street. Mr. Jaquith has been in police force for a number of years, and was the first regular man to be appointed to the beat, the duties of which he will now relinquish to Mr. Morse.

DR. GRENFELL IN ANDOVER

Announced $5,000 Gift for Reindeer from Canadian Government

Dr. Grenfell "of the Labrador" spent last night in Andover, having lectured to an immense audience in the City hall at Lawrence in the evening. Since the Doctor was in Andover, January 3, he has had a long and busy tour, lecturing in New York, Philadelphia, Washington (where he lectured with the President), Buffalo, Detroit, Chicago, and other western cities, and returning via Toronto and Montreal. He spoke at Dartmouth College on Monday night, visited the "Labrador orphans" near-by on Tuesday, and spoke at Concord, Manchester and Nashua on his way here. He left early this morning, and is now to take three days' rest (?), as the guest of Senator Erctor of Vermont, before sailing to England on a brief visit to his mother, then returning to St. John's and Labrador. He was specially jubilant over the news received here of the grant by the Ottawa Government of five thousand dollars for reindeer for the "Canadian Labrador." This, with nearly an equal amount given him in the "States," enables him to carry out his favorite project of introducing reindeer on his coast, the first herd of which he has already ordered from Norway. We remember with pleasure that the first couple of these animals contributed in New England was given by the people and the "Academy boys" of Andover!

C. C. C.

An Amusing Incident.

An incident which caused considerable amusement occurred on last Saturday afternoon and was witnessed by a large number of residents of Abbott Village. John Manning is one of the Village's most ardent admirers of the sport made famous by Isaac Walton, and on the afternoon mentioned he gathered together his rod and tackle and hurried to the Shawheenu river just above the mill dam. He stepped out on the ice and prepared to throw in, hoping to catch a pickerel that would be a credit to show to his relatives. All went well for a while, but Mr. Manning, in his eagerness for the fish, did not notice that the ice on which he was standing had broken away from the shore and that he was floating rapidly toward the mill dam. He made a vain effort to reach shore, but too late, and found himself shipwrecked on a cake of ice. He called loudly for help, and in a short time quite a crowd had gathered to the novel sight. Stephen Robb happened to appear on the scene, and without hesitation he ran to a nearby clothes yard and secured a line. In true cowboy fashion he threw the line to Mr. Manning, who was towed ashore none the worse for his experience, but with a firm determination not to venture on rotten ice again. The fishing expedition was postponed for the day.

A Bold Holdup

One of the boldest hold-ups which has ever been perpetrated in Andover, occurred on last Friday night about quarter to eleven, when Fred Murphy of High street was held up within 75 feet of his home and within a stone's throw of the square. Two men figured in the hold-up and Murphy, who is a small fellow, was completely overpowered by the highwaymen who jumped from behind a fence and ordered him to throw up his hands.

A revolver was thrust into his face and he immediately complied with the request. While one man covered Murphy with his revolver, the other went through his pockets. They received no booty, however, the only articles on him being two handkerchiefs which were taken. Murphy then called loudly for help and the men took to their heels and ran. In their haste they jumped a fence and ran through private land to North Main street, making good their escape. Murphy immediately notified relatives and they in turn informed the police of the affair. An investigation followed but no clue could be obtained which would lead up to the arrest of the highwaymen. Murphy could not give a very good description of the men as both wore caps which were pulled over their eyes to disguise them. That the assailants must have used Murphy roughly was shown by the marks on his face where he said that he was punched.

THE NEW FREE CHURCH

Plans Accepted by Parish for Edifice to be Erected on Elm Street

At the last meeting of the parish of the Free church plans for a new church were accepted. The cost of the edifice will be $40,000, and it is expected that the new furnishings and the new organ will cost $10,000 more. The structure will be located on the lot owned by the society on Elm street.

The new church is to be of simple, yet pleasing design, and will be an architectural addition to the town. It will be thoroughly modern in every respect, with ample provision for the many adjuncts of the church. In addition to the classes. The two parlors are to be so located and provided with sliding doors that both can be thrown open, thus making practically one large room.

In the basement of the parish house there will be lavatories, cloakrooms and a commodious kitchen with a modern equipment, and also a large dining room, with a seating capacity of 300. It is intended to use this room also as a gymnasium for the girls of the parish.

In the basement of the church proper there will be, in addition to the rooms to be occupied by the heating apparatus, a church proper, there will be a commodious parish house, with quarters for the Sunday-school classes, the women's societies and the men's clubs, as well as a gymnasium in the basement and other facilities.

The object of the committee in charge of the plans has been to secure not only a new place of worship, but a church home with conveniences for both religious and social work, and the plans accepted provide for just such a structure.

The architects are McKim, Mead & White of New York city. The structure large room which may be used, in time, as a gymnasium for the boys.

The interior of the church will resemble that of some of the best churches in England. Simplicity will be the keynote throughout. The clock and bell of the present church will be placed on the new church.

The present church and the lot on Railroad street on which it stands will be sold. The new location is a central one, being in a residential section, and yet near the business portion of the town.

The architects are now at work per-is to be of colonial design, and the exterior is to be of brick or stone. The main auditorium will be 76x50 feet in dimensions, and the seating capacity, including the small gallery in the rear, will be 554.

The parish house, which is designed as an annex, and which will be located in the rear and at right angles to the main structure, will be 90 feet long and 40 feet wide. This will contain the Sunday-school rooms, which will seat 300; a women's parlor, seating 60; and a men's parlor, seating 30. The Sunday-school rooms are to contain separate quarters for the kindergarten, junior and senior feeling the working plans and it is expected that the plans will soon be in the hands of the contractors for bids.

The Free church was organized in 1846, in opposition to slavery and was made up of members from many different denominations. It now has a membership of 468, the largest congregational body in town. Rev. Frederick A. Wilson is the pastor.

The committee appointed to secure the plans comprises Joseph A. Smart, John W. Bell, George A. Christie, George D. Lawson, J. Duke Smith, C. W. Clark, Mrs. Joseph W. Smith, Mrs. David Middleton and Miss Alice Counts.

Federated Boys' Club.

What the above organization stands for can best be shown by the names of some of the officers who today carry on the movement: Jacob A. Rila, of New York City, president; W. H. P. Faunce, of Brown University, Rev. Wm. B. Forbush, of Detroit, vice-presidents; Geo. N. Putnam, of Boston, secretary; Frank A. Day, of R. L. Day & Co., treasurer; Arthur A. Wordell, chairman executive committee.

The organization was incorporated in May, 1906, and has grown rapidly since, the object being to form a central bureau with all workers with mass clubs may secure superintendents, instructors for industrial work, plans for summer camp, etc., in fact the headquarters for all practical aid in any line of this work. Mr. Wordell is to speak to the directors and those interested in such boys' clubs, at the Guild house, next Sunday at 4.30 p.m., and later a public meeting will be held with various presidents of these larger clubs, to explain this line of work.

Concert by Musical Clubs.

The Phillips Academy Musical clubs gave their annual spring concert in the Town hall on last Friday evening, and although the audience was not large it was a very enthusiastic one and each of the numbers was heartily applauded.

The solos by Mr. Mackay and Mr. Beach were finely rendered, and both were encored. The former made a decided hit with the Topical Song.

Obituary.

BENJAMIN FLINT JENKINS.

Benjamin Flint Jenkins, one of the oldest and most respected residents of North Andover, passed away early Sunday morning at the Lawrence General Hospital, at the age of eighty-four years, eight months and twenty-one days. The deceased was a native of Andover and one of its selectmen prior to the incorporation of North Andover. He was the son of Capt. Benjamin and Betsy Berry Jenkins, living, until his marriage at the homestead, now the residence of John B. Jenkins.

He attended Phillips Academy, Andover, married Abby Barker, daughter of Jedediah Holt Barker, of North Andover, where he subsequently lived, becoming a successful farmer winning the respect and confidence of his townsmen by his upright, temperate and industrious habits. He had been ill all winter with a trouble that developed in his foot, and was removed to the hospital two weeks ago for amputation of the leg. Complete consciousness followed the operation but he succumbed to weakness of the heart. He is survived by one son, Milton S. Jenkins and one grandson, Alfred F. Jenkins, North Andover; one sister, Mrs. Caroline E. Putnam of Malden; two brothers John B. Jenkins and E. Kendall Jenkins of Andover. Funeral services were held Wednesday at two o'clock in the West Boxford church where Mr. Jenkins had been a constant attendant. Interment was in the family lot at Boxford.

MRS. MARGARET SHEVLIN.

Mrs. Margaret Shevlin, wife of Peter Shevlin, passed away at her home on Porter road on Wednesday after a long illness at the age of 69 years. She was a native of Ireland, but had resided here for many years. The funeral was held this afternoon at two o'clock, the service being conducted by Rev. Frederick Palmer. Interment was in Spring Grove cemetery.

ACCIDENT PROVED FATAL

Local Young Man Killed by a Fall on Paved Street. Assailant Held for Grand Jury

An unfortunate and sad accident, in which a local young man, James Welsh, lost his life, occurred on last Saturday night in Lawrence, when a push followed by a fall to the pavement caused almost instant death.

The accident occurred near the corner of Essex and Franklin streets, and was the result of a street fight between Welsh and a Lawrence youth, Joseph Carroll, who was later arrested.

The story as told by City Marshal Sheehan of the affair was given him by companions of both Welsh and Carroll, and is substantially as follows:

The party from Andover included six men who were walking along Essex street. John Poland of this town and Welsh were walking together, followed by the four others, who were some distance behind.

When near the corner of Franklin street the party met Carroll and a few of his companions. Welsh stopped Carroll and demanded a drink from him, but the latter refused. Welsh then pulled off his coat and threatened to take the liquor away from Carroll if he refused. A heated argument followed and Welsh attempted to strike Carroll, but missed. Carroll then pushed him backward and after staggering back about 50 feet he fell heavily to the street, his head coming in contact with the pavement.

He was picked up unconscious by his friends who saw that he was in a dangerous condition and the police were at once notified.

Poland accompanied his companion to the station, and related the facts to Captain Sullivan. Poland was held to await the outcome.

Captain Sullivan ordered Welsh's removal to the Cottage hospital, and notified Acting City Physician Daly to look after him. Welsh arrived at the hospital at 12.30 o'clock. At 1 o'clock he breathed his last, before medical aid could reach him.

James Welsh had been in this country only three years, being a native of Arbroath, Forfarshire, Scotland. He came to Andover three years ago, and had boarded at the home of Alexander Black, Essex street, this town. He was employed as a moulder at Emerson's foundry.

Welsh's father, mother and two sisters reside in Arbroath. He was a member of Clan McPherson, O. S. C., the Lawrence Caledonian club, and the Andover Football association. He was one of the star players of the latter organization, and put up an excellent game of right forward Saturday afternoon. He was covered from a severe attack of typhoid fever a few weeks ago.

As a result of the fracas Carroll appeared before Judge Mahoney in police court on Monday morning, to answer to the charge of manslaughter. It developed from the evidence given by all the witnesses that Welsh was at fault in creating the fight and that Carroll was acting on the defense. Welsh had been drinking during the evening and was somewhat under its influence when killed. An examination by Medical Examiner Dow showed that Welsh sustained a fracture of the back of the skull and that a cerebral hemorrhage had followed. This evidence was given by Dr. Dow and proved that it was not a blow that caused death.

Carroll was held for the grand jury, however, and the young man was released on bail.

The funeral took place Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock. A prayer service was conducted at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Black on Essex street, after which the remains were taken to the Free church where services were conducted by Rev. Frederick A. Wilson. There was a large attendance present. Two hymns were sung, "One Sweetly Solemn Thought" and "Jesus Lover of My Soul." Miss Annie Smart officiated at the organ.

The bearers were: Chief Daniel Taylor, Alexander Noble and William H. Black of Clan McPherson, and Chief Daniel Loudon, Hugh Campbell and Alexander Keeble of the Caledonian club, who walked by the side of the hearse to the grave. Delegations from the Moulders' Union, Clan McPherson, Lawrence Caledonian club and Andover Football club marched to the cemetery. There was a large and beautiful display of floral tributes. There were many beautiful flowers among the pieces some of which were: Pillow, Mr. and Mrs. Alexander Black and family; fiery cross, Clan McPherson; pillow, Caledonian club; wreath on stand, Andover Football club; anchor on stand, Iron Moulders; wreath, Boston Rovers Football club; spray, Ladies' Auxiliary of Clan McPherson.

President Bonilla. It was also reported that the naval forces of Nicaragua had captured the port of Trujillo, Honduras.

Salvador Joins Honduras.
Advices from Panama indicated that the republic of Salvador had formed an alliance with Honduras as against Nicaragua and 2,500 Salvadoreans had been landed at Amapala, under command of General Presa. President Bonilla of Honduras had taken personal command of a large section of his army on the march for Segovia, in Nicaragua. He was co-operating with a number of Nicaraguan revolutionists.

Stolypin Reform Promises.
The Russian douma listened with courtesy to a forty minute address by Premier Stolypin while he insisted that the government was willing to grant many reforms and create new standards of life. In the name of the emperor he proposed the following reforms: Freedom of the press and of speech, liberty of faith, the efficacy of the habeas corpus, substitution of one form of martial law for the present varying degrees of "exceptional security," local self government, reform of the zemstvos, responsibility of officials, agrarian reform, the abolition of the free entry of goods into Vladivostok, completion of the Trans-Siberian railroad in Russian territory, free and later compulsory education. On the plea that these reforms would require huge sums of money the premier urged that the budget be given immediate consideration. The burden of taxation would rest most heavily upon the rich by means of the income tax.

Notwithstanding all these promises, many of the opposition remained un pacified, and Prince Zeretel offered a resolution blaming the government for violating every right promised in the czar's manifesto of October, 1905. This angered the premier, who said that the debates must continue on legal lines and that the government would not permit firebrand tactics.

Rioting in Roumania.
An anti-Jewish outbreak in Roumania had assumed serious proportions early in the week, and Jews were fleeing over the frontier into Austria, where they were cared for by the Hebrew alliance of Vienna. The riots centered about the Roumanian town of Muldavia. At last accounts the revolt was spreading.

Disorder in Persia.
Advices from Teheran told of Indian mounted troops entering Persia to protect British consulates in the south, and it was rumored that the Afghans had moved toward the frontier. Russian forces were on the way to preserve order in northern Persia.

EDUCATIONAL

Hadley's Idea of Football.
In view of the recent utterances of President Roosevelt and President Eliot of Harvard on the subject of football in connection with college athletics considerable interest was aroused by the remarks of President Hadley of Yale, who in a recent speech at a meeting of Yale alumni at Plainfield, N. J., expressed the belief that football might very properly be permitted where the student body was composed chiefly of undergraduates, but in a university where the students were largely of the graduate or professional type football, by consuming time and subtracting from professional energy, became a harmful diversion.

Food at Cost in Schools.
Superintendent Maxwell of the New York city public school system has appealed to the board of education to supply simple food at cost price to the pupils who were found to be improperly nourished. At the same time he asked the board to supply eyeglasses free of cost to children of needy parents who may be suffering from imperfect vision. The commissioner of health had found 17,928 children with defective eyes in the schools last year.

Cornell's Debrutalized Rush.
A newfangled test of physical strength between the lower classes of Cornell university has just been tried out with apparent success under the personal inspection of President Schurman and other members of the faculty, the object being to prevent the resort to brutal or dangerous tactics. The rush took place in an inclosure 150 yards by 100 yards, chalked off into two parts. At the crack of a pistol the freshmen and sophomores rushed from opposite sides, the sophomores seeking to capture and hold as many of the freshmen as possible and detain them from the freshman banquet which was about to take place in the armory. Those freshmen caught and not rescued within three minutes were taken to another place to be decorated and painted and then marched around the campus before the laughing throng. The officers of the freshman class managed to reach the banquet hall in safety, but about 150 freshmen were captured and decorated. The sport proceeded under systematic ruling made by agreement between the undergraduates and the faculty.

Making the Schools Pay.
The latest educational scheme, evolved at Omaha, Neb., is to make it unnecessary for children to work for the support of their parents, young ger brothers or sisters by having the juvenile court pay to working children who are placed in school the exact amount of their earnings. These funds are to be obtained through regular weekly appropriations from churches, societies, clubs, etc.

Morgan Park Academy Closed.
Trustees of the Chicago university announce that the famous Morgan Park academy, established at a cost of $700,000, will be closed after June 1, as it has been running at a loss and as there now are so many good public high schools preparing students for college.

Minneapolis Teachers Advanced.
The Minneapolis board of education has recently voted an increase of $5 a month in the salaries of the grade teachers. Superintendent Jordan was re-elected for a term of three years and $1,000 added to his salary.

Commercial University Extension.
President Dabney of Cincinnati university is planning a commercial college in connection with the institution. He proposes to have the students work in banks and brokerage offices while pursuing the courses of study.

"Approved" Teachers.
A paragraph in the School Journal says that the Indiana legislature has passed a bill which gives the state board of education the right to recommend teachers' training courses to the normal schools. When such courses are properly taught these schools will be entitled to use the word "approved" in their titles and teachers will be given credit for work in these schools.

SCIENTIFIC

Against Pasteurizing Milk.
Professor Behring, the famous Berlin specialist on pulmonary diseases, is quoted as opposing the Pasteur system of purifying milk. He condemns also the sterilization of milk and the boiling of water to render them innocuous. He says that boiled milk is unsuitable food for infants and that the boiling of water kills the elements intended by nature for the making of bone and sinew. True protection for those who use the milk of cows, in his opinion, is the production of healthy cows.

National Funeral For Berthelot.
The French chamber of deputies adjourned Tuesday out of respect for the memory of the celebrated chemist, M. Berthelot, who was foreign minister in the bourgeois cabinet. Professor Berthelot died upon hearing the news of his wife's death, and the two will be buried together. The newspapers all agree that France has lost her greatest scientist, a man second only to Pasteur in the service rendered to humanity. He is credited with having paved the way for or given practical utility to saccharin, acetylene gas and smokeless powder. He reduced the component value of foodstuffs and placed within the bounds of possibility the substitution of chemical forms of nourishment for those supplied by nature.

Color Blind Artists.
That artists are apt to be color blind just the same as other men is the conclusion announced by Dr. Edward A. Ayres in an important paper for the April Century. After testing the color sense of a large number of colorists, engravers and illustrators Dr. Ayres found an average of one in twenty-two color blind, although as a class they were quicker to recognize varying shades. However, if an artist's eyes at birth do not possess all color seeing comes he cannot develop them by cultivation.

Fishes Hear and Talk.
A dispatch from Paris states that at the next meeting of the Academy of Sciences a paper written by Professor Koellieck, director of the zoological laboratory at Naples, will be read describing the experiments which he made with a special microphone in connection with fishes. These experiments, he claims, prove that fish emit a certain humming, enabling them to communicate with each other.

Forester Pinchot on Floods.
Gifford Pinchot, chief of the forest service, in an interview at Washington said that the great flood which visited the upper Ohio valley was due primarily to the cutting away of the forests on the water sheds in the heart of the Allegheny mountains. Originally these mountain slopes contained fine hardwood, hemlock and pine forests, which, together with the undergrowth, held back the water of rains and melting snow so that dangerous floods seldom occurred. The wholesale cutting of this timber had so denuded the hills that when heavy rains co-incident with snow thaws occurred quantities of water were precipitated into the streams, and these, emptying into the rivers, caused the disastrous floods which in recent years have done so much damage to property and caused so much loss of life. The remedy, in his opinion, would be in the replanting of forests and their conservation on a scientific plan of forest culture.

Acetylene Aids Plant Growth.
How Professor John Craig of Cornell university in a long series of experiments discovered that of artificial illuminants none is so closely akin to sunlight as the rays of acetylene gas is reported by W. T. Walsh in the April Technical World Magazine. By using this illuminant at all times when the sun was not on deck, either at night or on cloudy days, Professor Craig forced the finest strawberries to maturity sixteen days ahead of the record and radishes in three-fourths of the usual time without deterioration in quality. Geraniums and lilies were matured three weeks ahead of time. It was shown, moreover, that even on sunny days the use of acetylene reinforced the rays of sunlight and hastened the ripening process.

Vegetarians Beat Meat Eaters.
The result of a series of endurance tests conducted by Professor Irving Fisher of Yale was announced. Forty-nine persons were examined, including students, physicians, nurses and instructors, and the tests were such as holding out the arms as long as possible, deep knee bending and leg raising with subject lying on his back. Professor Fisher says that the nonflesh eaters have greater endurance than those accustomed to the ordinary American diet.

Emanations of Metals.
Professor Gruhn of Berlin has published details of his latest experiments demonstrating his theory that metals have characteristic smells, notwithstanding that many authorities have held that such bodies are absolutely odorless, inasmuch as they do not lose anything of their own weight. In the first experiment Herr Gruhn shows that a piece of copper, tin or other metal at all times gives off an odor, but which most persons cannot detect, but when the same pieces are heated above a lamp they give off readily distinguishable smells. After the heating is continued for an hour or so the smell decreases until equal to that in a cold state. If continued, the odor ceases to be appreciable. It is therefore inferred that the vaporized matter is not identical with the metal itself.

MISCELLANEOUS

Sinclair Colony Burned Out.
Helicon Hall, the large and unique building on the Palisades at Englewood, N. J., in which the co-operative home colony started by Upton Sinclair had wintered with forty to fifty residents, was completely ruined by fire March 16, and one of the workers lost his life, while others were injured jumping from windows, and all had narrow escapes, so quickly did the flames spread while all were asleep in their rooms. The origin of the fire was a complete mystery, and there was some talk of its being incendiary. The colony has not yet decided whether it will rebuild.

Death of T. B. Aldrich.
Thomas Bailey Aldrich, known as the dean of American poets, died at his Boston home March 19. He had recently passed his seventieth birthday with good health.

Fatal California Floods.
Floods in the Feather river near the town of Oroville, Cal., have caused the loss of twenty-seven lives and large damage to property.

Dowie Named His Successor.
General John A. Lewis, a deacon of the Christian Catholic church, who was for years a close friend of its founder, Dowie, is named as the new leader in the apostle's will. He is now in Mexico, but will return to Zion City at once to test the leadership with Voliva.

Big Oil Refinery Burned.
A portion of the plant of the Atlantic Oil Refining company at Point Breeze, below Philadelphia, burned Thursday, with a loss of $400,000. Only by desperate work were the firemen able to prevent the flames from spreading to the benzine and gasoline tanks, which would have caused a terrible explosion.

The Lake Shore Settlement.
An agreement between the Brotherhoods of Firemen and Engineers and the officers of the Lake Shore railroad was reached by which the men are to receive an average increase of 8 per cent in wages and a reduction in working hours from twelve to ten in the yard and its equivalent on the road.

Relief For Injured Mine Workers.
It is reported from Wilkesbarre, Pa., that the Lehigh Valley Coal company after a series of experiments has ordered a number of hospital cars to be placed in its mines. It is expected that the use of these cars will result in alleviating to a large degree the sufferings of injured miners, as they are equipped with removable stretchers, so as to avoid the necessity of handling the men after they are once put on the cars at the place where injured. These are said to be the first cars of this kind ever used in this country, and it is expected that they will soon be installed by other companies.

Jersey to Fine Corporations.
Samuel D. Dickinson, secretary of state for New Jersey, has announced his intention of collecting a fine of $250 each against some 8,000 corporations which, he says, have failed to file annual reports, according to the New Jersey statutes, making an aggregate fine of $2,000,000. It is contended also that all the directors of all these companies can be disqualified for one year.

Strauss Defends Salome.
The hostile reception of "Salome" in this country has drawn from the composer of its music, Richard Strauss, a sharp rejoinder. He wants to know why the man who accepts "Don Juan," "Figaro," "Carmen" and other operas dealing with immoral themes balks at "Salome." He declares that the man or woman who has clean hands, a pure heart and a spotless conscience can regard "Salome" and all art without disfavor or prejudice. He adds that it is for such men and women that all true artists labor—not for those vitiated or bigoted. The New York Musical Courier, our leading musical paper, says that the suppression of "Salome" is a manifestation of parochialism disgraceful in the highest degree. Bernard Shaw asks, with characteristic facetiousness, "What can you expect of people who rejected me?"

(Women troubled with fainting spells, irregularities, nervous irritability, backache, the "blues," and those dreadful dragging sensations, cannot hope to be happy or popular, and advancement in either home, business or social life is impossible. The cause of these troubles, however, yields quickly to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made from native roots and herbs. It acts at once upon the organ afflicted and the nerve centers, dispelling effectually all those distressing symptoms. Miss Emma Runtzler, of 631 State St., Schenectady, N. Y., writes:—"For a long time I was troubled with a weakness which seemed to drain all my strength away. I had dull headaches, was nervous, irritable, and all worn out. Chancing to read one of your advertisements of a case similar to mine cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I decided to try it and I cannot express my gratitude for the benefit received. I am entirely well and feel like a new person."

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most successful remedy for all forms of Female Complaints, Weak Back, Falling and Displacements, Inflammation and Ulceration, and is invaluable in preparing for childbirth and the Change of Life.

ODD WAYS OF POETS.

Tennyson. Artistically Fastidious, Was a Personal Sloven.

There is a sort of idea in the public mind that the poet is what scientists call a "fixed genius," that every poet is the exact counterpart of every other poet. There is probably no class of men in the world—if class it can be called—whose members differ more widely in personality.

Pope, for instance, was a miser. Dryden, Sedley, Rochester and Shelley seemed to have no use for money and "splashed it about in the most insane fashion. Shakespeare was a keen man of business. His contemporaries, Marlowe and Massinger, did not leave enough to have their bodies decently buried.

Coming down to modern times, Tennyson was artistically the most delicate and fastidious of men. A misplaced comma, an epithet which was not the perfection of expression, gave him nights of insomnia.

Yet he was perhaps the most utterly careless man of his generation regarding his personal appearance. Had he not been carefully watched by his devoted wife, he would have been quite content to wear a suit of clothes until it dropped off him bit by bit in obedience to the law of gravitation.

A great admirer of Tennyson once described his first meeting with the great poet.

It occurred at a roadside public house in the Isle of Wight. The late laureate was seated by the kitchen fire, with a short black clay pipe between his lips, burning grease spots out of a pair of check trousers with the point of a red-hot poker.

It was probably Tennyson's "faculty of silence" which helped him to secure the friendship of the greatest talker—in both senses of the phrase—of his generation, Thomas Carlyle.

Carlyle had occasional fits of silence, and he and Tennyson would sit on opposite sides of the hearth for six hours at a stretch without exchanging any words.

At the expiration of such a period of silent intercommunication Carlyle would knock the ashes out of his last pipe and remark with every symptom of the keenest intellectual satisfaction, "Aye, Alfred, mon, we've had a glorious night!"

Tennyson's great and friendly rival, Browning, was as different from him in his personal peculiarities as he was in point of genius.

He always looked as if he had just been turned out of a bandbox. Tennyson was one of the most silent of men, Browning one of the most ebullient and loquacious. Tennyson was pessimistic and somewhat morose. Browning was always bursting with optimism and expansiveness.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

SPEED OF FISHES.

Tarpon, Shark and Mackerel Are the Swiftest of Swimmers.

When scientists desire to find out how fast a certain bird flies, it is necessary only to set up poles and note by stop watches the time the bird requires to cross the interval. The speed of fishes is more difficult to ascertain. Nevertheless, as the Saturday Evening Post explains, estimates have been made showing that the mackerel, considering its handicap in size, comes close to being the champion racer.

Unquestionably the mackerel travels sometimes as fast as an express train at high speed—say, at the rate of sixty or possibly seventy miles an hour. Other things being equal, the larger the fish the faster it swims, just as the huge steamboat is able to travel at a speed much greater than the little harbor tug.

Undoubtedly the energy employed by a fish of great size, such as a thirty foot shark, when traveling at its best gait is something tremendous. An ordinary tug, which represents a maximum of energy in a minimum of bulk, utilizes about 200 horsepower. Of course it is only a guess, but it would not seem to be over the mark to suppose that a seventy foot whale makes use of 500 horsepower when it propels its huge bulk through the water at a rate of thirty miles an hour.

A whale, which is a mammal and not a fish, might be compared to a freight train if the shark is a cannon ball express, but it can beat the fastest "ocean greyhound" in a speed contest.

The tarpon is probably faster than the shark. It is believed that a tarpon in a hurry can travel at the rate of eighty miles an hour.

ANCIENT ARMIES.

Ten thousand horse and 100,000 foot fell on the fatal field of Issus.

The army of Artaxerxes before the battle of Cunaxa amounted to about 1,200,000.

An army of Cambyses, 50,000 strong, was buried in the desert sands of Africa by a south wind.

A short time after the taking of Babylon the forces of Cyrus consisted of 600,000 foot, 120,000 horse and 2,000 chariots armed with scythes.

Ninus, the Assyrian king, about 220 B. C., led against the Bactrians his army, consisting of 1,700,000 foot soldiers, 200,000 horse and 16,000 chariots armed with scythes.

When Xerxes arrived at Thermopylae his land and sea forces amounted to 2,641,610, exclusive of servants, eunuchs, women, sutlers, etc., in all numbering 5,283,220. So say Herodotus, Plutarch and Isocrates.

His Clever Ally

By W. CRAWFORD SHERLOCK.

Copyright, 1907, by Mary McKeon.

"Now, Tip, something must be done, but how I'm going to do it is more than I know."

Jim Granville stretched his great length on the grass beneath an old oak tree and addressed his fox terrier, who surveyed his master with evident interest and understanding. There was a frown on the broad forehead of the young man and a troubled look in his big brown eyes. Tip sat on his haunches, wagging his diminutive stump of a tail vigorously, one eye fixed intently on his master's face, while with the other he watched the movements of a squirrel on an overhanging branch.

"I'm in love, Tip," continued Granville, flicking the ashes from his cigar with an impatient gesture. "You know what that means, old fellow, since you've been paying your addresses to that little spaniel of Miss Browning's. Yet you can't understand why I don't tell the girl so and settle the whole matter, do you? Tip, canine affairs are different from human affairs. Men have responsibilities, and dogs don't. That's the whole difference in a nutshell."

Tip gave a short bark, as if he fully comprehended the distinction, and Granville went on: "I have a pretty good income, Tip, but it is not big enough to support two establishments. If I get married, my mother would have to live with us, and you know from your own experiences that she is a woman of decided convictions."

Tip shuddered at the remembrance of a whipping he had received for the slight offense of chewing up one of Mrs. Granville's gloves in a moment of absentmindedness and then hung his head.

"Well, Miss Browning also has decided views on certain questions of life, and she and my mother disagree upon almost every subject. The natural result of bringing such opposite natures together and compelling them to live beneath the same roof would be trouble, Tip, serious trouble too. I would have to side with my wife against my mother or I would have to side with my mother against my wife. In either case my position would be decidedly unpleasant. I don't expect you to fully understand this, old fellow. You were separated from your mother when you were too young to comprehend the meaning of filial affection. But human beings are quite different and have a certain duty to perform in looking after their maternal relations. Now, these are the facts in the case, Tip, and something must be done, but I don't know what it is to be."

The squirrel had disappeared from view, and Tip fixed his undivided attention upon his master, evidently meditating deeply over the perplexing problem. The stumpy tail ceased its pendulum-like motions, and his sharp ears were pricked up in an attitude of earnest attention.

"This crisis has come upon us suddenly, my boy," pursued Granville after a few moments of silence. "Things were running along all right, and there was no necessity for immediate action until this big fellow from California—Wentworth's his name—came upon the scene. He's been showing Miss Browning the most decided attention. Took her out three times last week in his auto and twice to the theater. In fact, every time I went there she was out with this confounded Wentworth, and I haven't had a chance to say a word to her since he came."

The terrier whined sympathetically, and his master continued: "He's twice as old as she is, Tip, but that doesn't make any difference in these days, when men of seventy marry women of twenty. There ought to be a law passed that would prevent people from marrying when there is more than five years difference in their ages, and if I ever go to congress I'll introduce such a measure. That won't help me now, though, and if I don't make a move he'll win out and leave me at the post. There you are, Tip. I've unbosomed my secret soul to you, the only friend in whom I can confide, and I look to you to straighten this tangle out for me."

If the fly that hovered about Tip's head had been Wentworth, Granville's anxiety would have been at an end. After making sure that his winged tormentor would worry him no more Tip glanced around and espied the squirrel several rods away, engaged in making his morning meal from some crumbs that had been left in the woods. Forgetting his master's troubles, Tip dashed off in pursuit, leaving Granville to solve the question that so greatly perplexed him. The young man, left to his own devices, lighted a fresh cigar and began a mental calculation as to the length of time that must elapse before he could hope for sufficient income wherewith to maintain his mother and wife in separate homes, provided, of course, that Wentworth did not succeed in carrying off Miss Browning before his eyes.

The calculation was interrupted by a series of ear splitting yelps, and Granville, fearing his pet had come to grief, arose and hurried down the path along which Tip had disappeared. As he reached a clearing a hundred yards or so away he stopped short, his eyes resting upon a curious scene.

In the center of the clearing stood Wentworth and Mrs. Granville. The former had one arm around the latter's waist, while, with his walking stick in his disengaged hand, he was vigorously parrying the furious rushes of the enraged Tip.

"I'm so glad you've come, Jim," cried Mrs. Granville as her son drew near. "You are just in time."

"It looks as if I'm around at the wrong time," grimly returned the young man as he proceeded to calm the excited Tip. "I don't quite understand what it all means. I didn't know you knew Mr. Wentworth."

"Not know Tom Wentworth!" exclaimed Mrs. Granville in surprise. "Why, I've known him ever since I was a child. He's Catherine Browning's uncle, you know, and while he was looking up his niece he found me out, and we've renewed our old friendship. Tom tells me—a pretty flush had crept into Mrs. Granville's cheeks, and her forty-five years of life seemed to dwindle perceptibly—that he has cared for me ever since he has known me, and he has persuaded me to go back to California, with him if you have no objections, Jim. What do you say?"

"I won't stand in the way of your happiness, mother," declared Granville with an emphasis that Mrs. Granville did not understand until Wentworth enlightened her.

"I knew Jim would be all right," observed the big Californian jovially. "He's been making some plans for himself, and I think we'd better make a double wedding of it."

"You're a clever ally, Tip, even if you're only a dog," remarked Granville as he walked toward Miss Browning's home. "That wild bolt of yours brought about a solution of the whole matter."

Marsh Cup Water Plant.

The plant that I found in the Hudson bay region which is most worthy of notice grows in the mossy muskegs, in places where there is little or no grass. It is remarkable for two reasons—the beauty of its flower and its water containing properties. The leaves, which grow flat upon the ground, are broad and green. The bell of the flower seems adapted as a natural reservoir for water, of which, from a large one, there can easily be obtained as much as an Egyptian coffee cup will hold. But the beauty of it was that in the early autumn, when the nights were frosty, but the heat still excessive by day, the water it contained was always iced, for these charming flower bells are evidently constructed to resist frost, and as they close in toward the top they protect from the rays of the sun the lump of clear ice formed within the calyx at night. The result of this was that often when toiling along at midday, hot and weary, through a stagnant swamp all I had to do to slake my thirst was to pluck a few of these miraculous flowers to obtain so many small cups full of delicious water, each with a little lump of ice floating on the top.—Blackwood's Magazine.

What Boys Learned 300 Years Ago.

Schoolboys in old England took to Latin and Greek at an early age. At St. Saviour's Grammar school, Southwark, in 1611 a pupil of seven years and three months was admitted as an ordinary occurrence, who signed his form of admission, stating himself to be "reading and learning in the Accidence and entering into Propria quae Maribus, etc., and also Tully his second epistle, among those gathered by Sernius, and Corderius' dialogues, etc." The hours of study were long too. An old record says that from March till September "the child is to come at 6 in the morning and be at school till 11. Again at 1 and tarry till 6. The rest of the year he is to begin in the morning at 7 and leave at 5 in the afternoon. The master will not give leave to play but once a week." The master was to be "skilled in the Latin and able to teach grammar, oratory, poetry and Greek, as also the principles of Hebrew. He is to be of a wise, sociable and loving disposition, not hasty or furious, nor of ill example. He shall discern the nature of every child, if such may be discerned."

What He Made.

Towne—Well, he's a tailor, you know. He's not used to polite society. It's only natural to expect a break.

Browne—Yes, but he made another breach of good manners shortly after that—

Towne—Ah, a pair of breaches! That's still more natural for a tailor.—Catholic Standard and Times.

MUSICAL TYRANTS.

Trials of the New York Hostess Who Hires Operatic Singers.

Not so very long ago a soprano who had been engaged to sing at one of the largest houses on Fifth avenue, with her maid, was ushered into the room reserved for the artists. She was slow in removing her wraps and concluded after she was part of the way out of them that it was time for the hostess to welcome her.

So she told her maid to put them on again after she had inquired of one of the servants where the lady was. When he saw the preparations for departure he rushed in haste to the hostess.

She had been detained at the dinner table, as a dinner of very elaborate character was preceding the musical. It was difficult for her to leave her guests. She reached the hall, however, just as the singer's ample form was disappearing through the portiere.

"Ah, Mrs. Smith," the singer said. "Then I am in the right house? I was going out to tell my coachman we had made a mistake, else you would have been at the door to meet me."

The hostess looked as if she would like to speed her flight into the open, but her guests were soon to arrive, and she did not dare risk offending the star attraction at her biggest party of the season.

Some of the singers make it a condition that no other woman shall be engaged and no musicians of any kind without consulting them. A young hostess sent out cards to invite her friends to hear a great prima donna sing. Afterward she heard from her friends of all kinds of wonderful performers that she might also have engaged.

As the money question played no part in her plans the young woman began to engage them. By the time the night of the party arrived she had, in addition to the soprano, a band of choir boys who would look beautiful marching down her marble stairway, a band of Venetian gondoliers who would be charming at the entrance to the music room caroling "Santa Lucia," a baritone who sang beautiful love songs in excellent French and a voice as soft as pomade, a girl who could pound the piano with the best of the men players and a quartet that played antique music on near antique instruments.

The prima donna arrived and beheld in the artists' room this job lot of musical entertainers. The hostess hurried in to greet her.

"But surely," the prima donna said, "you don't need me when you have so much for your guests?"

The singer was in earnest. She was perfectly willing to go home and lose her $3,000 fee rather than be part of such a musical vaudeville as the inexperienced hostess had planned. Out of gratitude because she consented to remain to make the party a success, the young matron sent the prima donna a diamond bracelet the next day.—New York Sun.

The Spleen.

The spleen? Up to 1800 no physician dared to stand up in a clinic and tell what it was made for. For ages it was supposed to be the organ of irascibility. "Oh, his spleen is up!" meant that the old man was hot in the collar. Curious thing, that spleen. There is a herb called "spleenwort," which was supposed to remove such splenic disorders as ill humor, melancholy and irritability. I saw a spleen the other day for the first time and was astounded. It was a soft, highly vascular, plum colored thing with a smooth surface. It was nearly six inches in length and weighed seven ounces. Now here is the funny feature of the spleen: After a hearty meal it is very much smaller than at other times, which may help to explain why a man is good natured after dinner. In diseased conditions the spleen may reach a weight of eighteen or twenty pounds.—New York Press.

FROM AN ANDOVER WINDOW

JOHN UNDERWOOD

"Hearken those blissful birdies how they sing,
And see the freshest flowers how they spring
Full to my heart of revel and of solace."

Chaucer.

John Underwood's Essay—

Easter, 1907. It is almost here. Again we are going to see the grandest thing Nature has to show us. Open your eyes and see how the change takes place this year. First the snow, then the mud, then the buds and the birds, then the leaves and flowers and clear, blue skies.

Just think what is before us! Tens of thousands of birds with the sweetest cadences in their songs, repeated for us over and over again, if only we will hear; myriads of blossoms on plant and tree, the whole earth arrayed as a bride, if only we will look; the universal awakening of all good things in field and hill, in bird and beast, and in your heart, oh fellow-man, if you will only open it to let Spring-time in! For it is Spring that is coming. The fairest transformation scene the world has to show happens here in Andover during the next few weeks. And yet many of us are so hardened in our shells and have such heavy eyes and dry hearts that we will hardly notice the wonder of it.

We will go to our work and think of our dinners or our clothes, the colored comic Sunday supplement will make us glad, and our fancies will dance to rag-time music, and the tinsel of the theatre will seem beautiful to us. We will never notice that the whole town is flooded with new, beautiful, musical life.

"And Earth unto her leaflet tips, Tingles with the Spring."

Let us get in touch with Nature, the great healer. Let us open our doors and get out into the open air. Let us allow the Sun to warm our cold hearts, let us let the winds blow all the meanness out of us.

Stop thinking about your aches and pains, of course you are going to die sometime. Stop thinking about your insults and worries, we all have them. Stop thinking about the wickedness of others, of course their favorite sins are different from yours. Easter is here, Spring is coming. Rise from the dead grudges and failures of the past to new, generous, happy Springlike life.

A certain man had lost his courage in his fight with disease and had turned his face to the wall to die. Another was ceasing to struggle for manliness and had begun to float down the stream. A third had got disgusted with men's meanness and was just resolving to fight them with their own mud. Suddenly Spring was here. She blew her clarion through the earth, then a blue-bird flashed across the yard and its soft voice was heard around the windows.

Straightway the sick man turned toward the window and stretched himself and asked where his clothes were. And the weak man stopped in the midst of a maudlin cheer, and, touched with the power of awakening life around him, turned himself and began pulling up stream again. And the third man listened and shook himself and laughed with all his might at himself, and had an Easter party for his friends.

I have been looking at plans for a May music festival of the school children long enough; and now I am going to turn the plans over to the lawful protectors of children's music in the town,—the school committee and the teachers. We shall see what they make of the idea.

Professor Harry Graves passed through town two weeks ago, and I was glad to meet him, for I have a confidence that he is "doing something." He had just come from Maine, where he had been opposing an unwise lumber proposition before the Legislature. He was on his way to Albany where a similar project is before the New York Legislature. Not a minute too soon have the wise men appeared who know how to guard our remaining forests. In the past, ignorance has done our national trees more harm than deliberate sinning has done.

COLONIAL THEATRE—BOSTON.

A theatrical event of unusual importance is scheduled for the Colonial Theatre, Boston, for two weeks, beginning March 25, when the Weber Theatre Company, direct from New York, will present the latest laughing success, "Dream City" and "The Magic Knight," a double bill entertainment, with libretto and lyrics by Edgar Smith and music by Victor Herbert.

Obituary

MOSES TYLER STEVENS.

A rare life passed out into the eternal in the death of Hon. Moses Tyler Stevens at his home in North Andover last Monday evening.

For several years the ravages of long years in active life had been seen in a less prominent share on his part in business, but not until within a few months had he been obliged to relinquish entirely his place as a leading business man, and a citizen interested in all the life of his community.

Early Monday afternoon he grew very weak but he again rallied. Towards night he grew worse and gradually failed until the end which occurred at 9.30 o'clock. Heart failure was the cause of death.

At the time of death the family physician, Charles P. Morrill, M. D., and the entire family with the exception of a daughter, Mrs. Arthur C. Lovekin of Riverside, California, were at his bedside.

Hon. Moses Tyler Stevens, a younger son of Nathaniel Stevens and Harriet Hale, was born in Andover, October 10, 1825. At the time of his birth, Mr. Stevens' parents lived in a house which stood on the shore of Stevens pond near the present site of the Stevens mill and is still standing, having been moved to another location remodeled and made into two tenements. He was in the seventh generation directly descended from the original John Stevens, whose name appears fifth in the first list of 23 householders settling in North Andover (then Coochibewick) in 1641. On the maternal side he came from an old and noted family, belonging within what is now the territorial limits of Lowell.

His father served with distinction as a lieutenant in the war of 1812, and engaging in the woolen business in 1813, he established the oldest manufacturing plant which has uninterruptedly carried on its business up to the present time. The site is that of the first saw mill built in this vicinity.

After attending the district school, Mr. Stevens attended the famous Franklin Academy, since discontinued, and afterwards entered Phillips Academy at Andover where he graduated in class of 1842. In the same year he entered Dartmouth college but spent but a short time at that institution, leaving it to engage in business with his father, Captain Nathaniel Stevens, who, as was stated above, ranked among the foremost in the history of the early manufacturers of woolens in the New England states.

Today the concern, which is now known as M. T. Stevens & Sons' company, (Nathaniel, Sam D. and M. T. Stevens, Jr.) is the most extensive woolen manufacturing corporation controlled by one family in the United States owning and operating the Stevens and Osgood mills in North Andover, the Marland mills in Andover, the Stevens & Co.'s mills in Haverhill, and the Franklin mills in Franklin, N. H. In addition to this business Mr. Stevens was interested in various other enterprises. He was president of the Stevens Linen plant of Webster, Mass., president of the Andover National bank for 10 years, director of the Andover Savings bank, Andover National bank, and the exchange National bank, Boston, also of the Merrimack Mutual Fire Insurance company.

After making a success of business he became a power in politics, both in town affairs and those of the commonwealth and nation, and a pillar in the Democratic party of which he has ever been a prominent member and leader, although for some years he has not taken any active part.

For 25 years consecutively he was chosen as the moderator of the town meeting and when in the year 1881, his name was mentioned as a candidate for representative to the General Court, his supporters and friends went to work and sent him to the State House at Boston by a safe majority. He served in this office for one year. However, he returned again in the year 1888 as a senator from his district. His political record did not end here, for he was elected to the National house in 1890 and served with distinction as the congressman from his district, the 5th, until the year 1894. While in congress he was a member of the ways and means committee and introduced the bill providing for the placing of wool on the free list, and did much to advance the sentiment for free raw material for manufacturing interests in New England.

The success of the Stevens mills has ever been a great advantage to the people of the community, giving to them steady and lucrative employment. The interest of Moses T. Stevens in the welfare of his native town never waned and his many acts of generosity attained for him universal respect. He recently provided for an elegant public library, now in course of erection, to be known as the Stevens Memorial library, in memory of his parents. He granted a tract of land, centrally located within the limits of the town proper, for the use of a public playstead. He made it possible on the erection of Johnson High school building, for the town to have in connection with it, a town hall, known as Stevens hall, for which he donated the sum of $5000, and he erected a beautiful club house for his male employees.

Many other charitable and deserving objects have received substantial aid from time to time; among these are the Old North Unitarian church of North Andover Centre, where Mr. Stevens attended and the Lawrence Home for Aged People of which he was a director.

He leaves three sons, Nathaniel, Sam D. and M. T. Stevens, and three daughters, Mrs. John F. Tyler, Mrs. Whitman Cross of Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Arthur C. Lovekin of Riverside, Cal., and a sister, Mrs. J. H. D. Smith of Boston, and six grandchildren.

Funeral services were held from the beautiful home on Osgood hill on Thursday afternoon, and later a public service followed at the Old North church where so many generations of the Stevens family have so long worshipped.

All business establishments in which the deceased was interested, in Andover, North Andover and other towns, were closed all day, while work was suspended in all factories and stores, during the hours of the funeral.

Arrangements at the church were in charge of the following prominent citizens: George E. Kunhardt of North Andover, Charles A. Appleton of North Andover, Harry W. Clark of North Andover, John Hamilton Morse of North Andover, George Abbot of Boston, Philip Yost and Carl Vetter of North Andover.

Mourners, including many prominent friends and business associates of the deceased, arrived at the North Andover station from New York, Boston, Franklin, N. H., Lowell, Lawrence, Andover, Methuen and other places during the noon hour, and were immediately conveyed to the church in carriages in charge of William H. Higgins of Andover.

In the presence of the throng of people who completely filled the edifice, the services were begun at 1.30 o'clock by the pastor, Rev. S. C. Beane, Jr.

The order of the solemn and impressive ritual services was as follows:

Reading of the service according to the United cup. "I am the resurrection and the life."
Reading of 23 Psalm
Tribute
Prayer
Response—Choir
Lord's Prayer in unison
Singing, verse of "Auld Lang Syne"
Benediction

Burial, which was strictly private, took place in the family lot in Ridgewood cemetery, where committal services were conducted by Rev. S. C. Beane, Jr.

The pall bearers were eight nephews of Mr. Stevens: Eben S. Stevens, of Quinnburg, Conn.; John P. Stevens, of Plainfield, N. J.; Horace N. Stevens, of New York City; Brooks Stevens, of Lowell; George Stevens, of Lowell; Nathaniel S. Hunting, of Quincy; Edward H. Smith, of Brookline; Isaac Osgood, of Lawrence.

During the services the eulogy was delivered by the officiating clergyman, Rev. S. C. Beane, Jr.

The floral gifts came from all parts of the State and outside, attesting to a marked degree the widespread association which the deceased had and the deep affection of the great number of business associates who had known him in his long and eventful life.

Life's lessons he had learned; had drained the Of earth's experiences of smiles and tears; He was his time then gladly to take up The higher labors of his grander years.

Old Eyes.

An aged man by grandson led,
"Thinking of old times and olden days,
Where in youth his prayer-book read,
And altars loved through old and grey."

His earthly life was growing lone,
Yet the old church to him was dear,
He thought of friends he there had known,
Of certain graves that clustered near.

And he the spell of silence broke,
As home he walked in thoughtful way,
When to his grandson thus he spoke,
"Of what his eyes had seen that day:

The church seemed full to me, dear boy,
And dear faces beamed on me there,
Somehow I feel the old-time joy,
When I, with them God's worship share."

There sat Squire Ward in solemn awe,
In his accustomed front square pew,
And on side aisle I plainly saw,
The widow Tread, and Hannah, New.

And how the beams and rafters rang,
When Susan Miles let on the air,
And all the choir Old China sang,
Big viol played by Captain Ware.

Why grandiose where are your eyes, I pray?
The comely youth replying said,
The people whom you name today,
For many years have all been dead.

Dead? Dead? my boy, how can that be?
You might not see them, but I did;
I tell you as they looked to me,
Eyes I may have to you forbid.

Eyes one may have of flesh or mind,
Blindness is often want of thought;
But having eyes some still are blind,
And some can see who eyes have not.

The old may see through mist of years,
Nor need my story cause surprise,
Facts I trace often with tears,
Because I have an old man's eyes.

COMMUNICATION

Speaking about amateur productions I can truthfully say I have never seen a play, players and music so well balanced in all my 41 years. Through the kindness of one of the officers of the organization, I was an attendant at one of their rehearsals, and I can tell you truthfully, those who are thinking of going to see "Why Knott" in the Town Hall, April 3rd, will see a play far surpassing anything ever held in the town before. This self same organization presented "A Manager's Troubles" last year before a large assemblage, and it was thought a great success. But let me tell you while "A Manager's Troubles" is a spicily little farce, it does not hold a candle to the production of this season.

Yours,

BOYISH DESIRE FOR WORK.

Often a Sign of Arrested Development Instead of Strength.

Parents often think that their son is especially promising because he wants to get to work young, wants to leave school and be earning. This is never a sign of strength, but always of weakness. When a boy wants to get to work instead of getting ready to work it indicates arrested development.

There is not one probability in fifty that a boy who desires to leave school at the sixth grade and is allowed to do so will ever amount to anything. It is not the fact that he does not have as much education as the other boys, but that he does not have their purpose to get ready for the doing of things.

Teachers often greatly err in dealing with such boys and their parents by trying to show how important it is that they should know what they will learn in the seventh and eighth grades, whereas that is the least part of it. It is a case of arrested development usually, and this is what should be treated, treated as a disease.

We make a lot of talk about defective sight and hearing, and we do well, but it is vastly more important that we "get busy" in defective mental progressive development. There is a near-sightedness of parents and pupils that is criminal. It contributes to delinquency and, as I think, is within the status of and subject to court punishment.

It sometimes shows itself in diverted attention, in dissipated interest and often in overathletic or fraternity zeal. The college theory is that the fraternity chaps are the elect, but life does not show that. The data are imperfect at present, but there is enough to make it wholly probable that when the figures are in it will be clearly shown that in the last fifteen years when fraternity life has been extra social and extra political in clannishness much of the fraternity zeal indicates approaching arrested development. It is entirely clear already that this is characteristic of the high school fraternity, because it almost invariably means that a set of fellows dare not trust themselves to win honors in the open contest, but seek it as a favoritism by means of a little band of social high-waysmen, as many of these high school fraternities are.—Journal of Education.

ANCIENT ARMIES.

Italy a little before Hannibal's time was able to send into the field nearly 1,000,000 men.

The army of Terah, king of Ethiopia, consisted of 1,000,000 men and 300 chariots of war.

Hannibal during his campaign in Italy and Spain plundered 40 towns and destroyed 300,000 men.

Sesostris, king of Egypt, led against his enemies 600,000 men, 24,000 cavalry and twenty-seven scythe armed chariots in 1491 B. C.

The city of Thebes had a hundred gates and could send out at each gate 10,000 fighting men and 200 chariots—in all, 1,000,000 men and 2,000 chariots.

Hamlicar went from Carthage and landed near Palermo. He had a fleet of 2,000 ships and 3,000 small vessels and a land force of 300,000 men. At the battle in which he was defeated 150,000 were slain.

"Home" in Our Language.

In no other language, according to the London Telegraph, is there a word expressing the ideas and associations which are aroused at the sound of the simple yet heart touching word "home." A Frenchman once translated Cardinal Newman's hymn, "Lead, Kindly Light," and in his hands the beautiful line "The night is dark, and I am far from home," became "La nuit est sombre, et je suis loin de mon foyer," the translator having been obliged to use for home the French word which describes the green room of a theater. The Italian and Spanish "casa," the German "haus"—their "helm" is too general to have any particular value—and the Russian "doma" all refer to a building of some kind or other and have none of the memories and associations that cluster round the precious English word.

RHEUMATISM CANNOT BE CURED UNLESS URIC-O IS USED

Sudden Deaths, Heart Failure and Paralysis Are Caused by Poisonous Uric and Rheumatic Acids.

The disease whose cause is shrouded in mystery, the affliction that is said to be incurable, is commonly known as paralysis. Show us a person suffering with this disease, and you will find that at some time previous to the attack, the patient suffered from some form of Rheumatism. This dangerous disease should not be neglected, especially where there is a cure within such easy reach. We refer to Smith's Specific Uric-O, a harmless compound, free from alcohol and poison, and made to cure Rheumatism only. Uric-O acts with marvelous swiftness on the blood, muscles and kidneys, and cannot fail to remove all traces of poisonous Uric and Rheumatic acid from the system. Uric-O is not a cathartic, does not affect or distress the stomach, and is the only known liquid preparation that will relieve and permanently cure Rheumatism in its most distressing forms. We want all Rheumatic sufferers to test the merits of Uric-O, therefore by addressing the SMITH DRUG COMPANY, SYRACUSE, N. Y., a liberal size sample and circular will be sent free. Uric-O is sold by Druggists at $1.00 per bottle, or will be sent direct upon receipt of price.

Uric-O is sold and recommended in Andover by FALSE ALARM OF FIRE.

A Peril Always to Be Met Promptly on Board Ship.

It was on board the Northern Light, says Captain Osbon in "A Sailor of Fortune," that a false alarm of fire was sounded and disaster prevented only by prompt action. A passenger, looking down through the boiler hatch, saw the red painted boiler fronts and, seeing the damelike color amid a cloud of steam, shouted, "Fire!" Immediately the whole vessel was in an uproar, and a dangerous panic was imminent. I was one of the underofficers.

The climax came when the quartermaster saw a minister of the gospel on the rail trying to lower the bow of one of the ship's boats. I ran to him and ordered him to come down on deck. The minister paid no attention, and I seized his coat tail to drag him down by force.

Perhaps it was an old coat, for the seams parted, and a second later I had the ministerial coat tail in my hands. He came down then. He was angry and was likewise a spectacle to look upon.

He started to call an indignation meeting, but most of the passengers had recovered from their fright by this time and were inclined to be merry at the reverend gentleman's expense.

He went raging to the captain, who summoned me to appear. I came, still carrying the coat tail in my hand.

"Mr. Osbon," he said, "what are your orders in case of a false alarm of fire?"

"My orders," I said, "are to stop it by any means necessary. I may knock a man down, throttle him or split him wide open."

The captain turned to the late minister.

"Those are Mr. Osbon's orders," he said. "You are fortunate that it was only your coat that was split open."

The danger from the false alarm of fire on shipboard is second only to the real thing and is always a peril to be met promptly.

His Fatal Mistake.
